Stefanie Bürrig studied law at the University of Hamburg and completed her legal traineeship at the Hanseatic Higher Regional Court in Hamburg, successfully passing the second state examination in 2009.

Between her first and second state exams, she gained her first professional experience during a six-month internship in the legal department of Philips. Following her studies, she worked as a legal counsel for internationally active construction companies in the renewable energy sector until the end of 2019. From 2020 to 2021, she expanded her expertise to include insurance distribution law through her work at an insurance company.

Since 2022, Stefanie Bürrig has been working as an attorney for Leinemann Partner Law Firm. She supports the Hamburg team with her extensive experience in addressing corporate legal matters and in drafting and negotiating construction, service, and procurement contracts in both German and English.

Her primary focus lies in construction-related consulting and in both out-of-court and court representation of clients in private construction law, as well as in drafting and negotiating construction contracts. She is also well-versed in conducting regular legal training for employees, contract management, and project management. She is particularly dedicated to assisting clients with corporate legal questions and finding efficient and cost-effective solutions.

Stefanie Bürrig is a member of the Hanseatic Bar Association in Hamburg. She has a daughter and is currently on parental leave.
